

SALARY SACRIFICE AND SAVE⁺

Save a little now, benefit a whole lot later.

FACT SHEET 2

29 SEPTEMBER 2017

The minimum employer contribution set out in the Superannuation Guarantee (SG) legislation is currently 9.50%¹ of your salary². For many Australians, this is the only amount being saved for their future retirement.

Planning to rely on the Age Pension?

The Age Pension provides a safety net for a basic standard of living. It may not be enough to provide you with the kind of lifestyle you want when you stop working. What's more, the Age Pension eligibility age will be dependent on your birth date as reflected in the below table.

Age Pension age for those born after June 1952
New Pension age	Affects people born
65.5	From 1 July 1952 to 31 Dec 1953
66	From 1 Jan 1954 to 30 June 1955
66.5	From 1 July 1955 to 31 Dec 1956
67	From 1 Jan 1957 onwards

Make sure you have the financial support and comfortable lifestyle you want in retirement – consider topping up your super with extra contributions to boost your super savings.

Salary sacrifice is just one of a number of ways to get started.

A transfer balance cap (currently $1.6 million) will be applied on the amount of super you can transfer into the retirement phase once you choose to retire. This applies as a total across all your super accounts and not per fund. This cap will be indexed each year.

Whilst it is important to be aware of this transfer balance cap, there continues to be no limit on the amount you can hold in your Accumulation account that is concessionally taxed at 15%, regardless of your age.

For more information, you can read our Fees, costs and tax fact sheet available at www.ngssuper.com.au/PDS.

¹ The SG is proposed to increase in subsequent years until the rate reaches 12% by July 2025. For more information, refer to our Opportunities and limits for super contributions fact sheet on our website at www.ngssuper.com.au/PDS.

Topping up your super using salary sacrifice contributions

Salary sacrifice is a tax-effective way to save for retirement. Putting a regular amount from your pay into your super is a great way to grow your super.

If you make a contribution to your super using salary sacrifice, it will only be taxed at the concessional contribution tax rate of 15%³ when received by the Fund, which is quite a bit less than the marginal income tax rate of 32.5% (plus the Medicare levy of 2%⁴) which applies for people on average incomes.

Keep your whole situation in mind

Remember, salary sacrifice contributions count towards your income when assessing your eligibility for certain Government benefits, including the Government co-contribution. More information is available from the Australian Taxation Office (ATO) website, www.ato.gov.au.

What's the difference between before- and after-tax contributions?

Before we go into how salary sacrifice contributions work, let's take a quick look at the difference between before- and after-tax contributions.

Before-tax contributions (concessional contributions)

Super contributions made from your pay before income tax is deducted are referred to as before-tax or concessional contributions. These contributions include employer contributions and any salary sacrifice contributions that have been made with your employer's agreement.

Keep in mind that there is an annual limit of $25,000, regardless of your age, on your before-tax contributions to super. For future financial years this limit may change. The really important thing to remember is that this limit includes the contributions that your employer makes on your behalf. Additionally, they are counted in the financial year that your super fund receives them – so you need to take that into account when considering making additional before-tax contributions. These contributions are taxed at 15%³ when received by us.

After-tax contributions (non-concessional contributions)

After-tax contributions are made from money from which you've already paid tax. They might come from your after-tax pay or from other income you've earned or savings elsewhere. These contributions aren't taxed again if you put them into super, only their investment earnings will be taxed.

The annual limit on after-tax contributions is $100,000 p.a. provided the balance of all your superannuation accounts is less than $1.6m. Where your combined super balance as at 30 June the previous year is greater than $1.6m, you will not be eligible to make after-tax contributions. If you are under age 65 you can make after-tax contributions of up to $300,000 over a three-year period – this is referred to as the bring forward rule.

³ For individuals with a combined income exceeding $250,000, a portion of your concessional contributions will be taxed at the rate of 30%. This high income tax threshold will be assessed by the ATO as part of your annual tax return. Combined income refers to the sum of your taxable income plus concessional contributions.

⁴ In the 2017 Federal Budget, the government announced their intention to increase the Medicare levy from 2% to 2.5% from 1 July 2019. This has not yet been legislated.

If you are aged between 65 and 74, you will not be able to take advantage of the bring-forward rule and you will need to meet the work test⁵ to make an after-tax contribution up to the annual cap amount.

A further constraint on the 3-year bring forward rule is that if your account balance is close to $1.6m, you will only be able to bring forward the annual cap amount for the number of years that would take your balance to $1.6m.

See table below for further clarification.

Super balance	Contribution and bring forward amount available
$1.3m – less than $1.4m	3 years (3 x $100,000 = $300,000)
$1.4m – less than $1.5m	2 years (2 x $100,000 = $200,000)
$1.5m – less than $1.6m	1 year (1 x $100,000 = $100,000)
$1.6m or more	Nil

How the bring forward rule works

The bring forward rule is triggered if you make an after-tax contribution of $100,001 or greater in the financial year.

For example, based on a person aged 60 with less than $1.3m in super

- you might choose to contribute $250,000 in one year then $50,000 in the next, however in the third year you wouldn't be able to make any after-tax contributions at all as you will exceed the $300,000 limit.
- Alternatively, you might choose to make $300,000 in after-tax contributions in one year and in the following two years no further after-tax contributions would be allowed.

Transitional arrangements could be in place for you if you have triggered the bring-forward rule in 2015/16 or 2016/17 but have not fully utilised the bring-forward amount. The amount available will be reduced to reflect the reduced annual contribution caps.

If you are interested in making a large contribution and would like to discuss the timing that would meet your requirements, we have representatives who can provide you with general advice and explain the options available.

What else?

Whether you're considering before-tax or after-tax contributions, remember that:

- contributions and investment earnings must be preserved. You may need to pay tax if a benefit is paid to you when you are under age 60.
- if you are aged between 65 and 74, we can accept your additional contributions provided you meet the work test⁵. If you are 75 or over, although we can accept superannuation guarantee contributions from your employer, by law we are unable to accept any voluntary contributions from you.

It is important to check that your employer 9.5% super guarantee contribution will not be impacted by any salary sacrifice. For most employers it does not – but it's best to check first.

You may also claim a tax deduction for personal contributions (subject to the concessional contribution limit and your eligibility to contribute). You will need to notify us of your intent to claim a tax deduction on the personal contribution prior to any withdrawal from your super account.

⁵ The work test applies to people aged 65 to 74 years who want to make an after-tax (non-concessional) contribution. If you're aged 65 or over (but under the age of 75), you can make after-tax contribution if you're at least gainfully employed on a part-time basis. In short, you must work for at least 40 hours in a period of not more than 30 consecutive days in the financial year in which you plan to make a super contribution. The work test can be satisfied where you receive remuneration for your efforts. You will need to confirm with the ATO whether your specific arrangements satisfy the work test rules.

How do before-tax and after-tax contributions compare?

To get an understanding of the difference between after-tax contributions and salary sacrifice contributions (illustrated for the 2017/18 financial year), let's take a look at the examples of Dave and Debbie.

Example 1

Dave makes additional contributions

Dave is 53 years of age and has a salary of $70,000 per year (before any deductions, including tax). He has decided that he would like to boost his retirement savings by making some additional contribution to his superannuation. He knows that he can afford to contribute approximately $11,500 from his after-tax income but would like to know whether he should contribute this money to his super from before-tax or after-tax income.

Dave's taxation situation would be as follows, depending whether he makes after-tax or before-tax contributions:

	After-tax contribution	Before-tax contribution
Gross salary	$70,000	$70,000
Less salary sacrifice contribution	–	$18,350 (before tax)
New taxable income	$70,000	$51,650
Less income tax and Medicare Levy	$15,697 ⁶	$9,141 ⁶
Net income	$54,303	$42,509
Less after-tax super contribution	$11,794	–
Net income	$42,509	$42,509

In this situation, Dave could:

- contribute $11,794 after tax, or
- contribute $18,350 before tax (which would result in a net contribution of $15,597 after applying the 15% contributions tax).

The net income for both scenarios is the same – $42,509. However, Dave's before-tax contribution provides him with a more favourable outcome as

- his income tax is reduced from $15,697 to $9,141 and
- he also saves $3,803⁷ extra in his super.

Does Dave get a co-contribution?

Dave's salary sacrifice contributions are included in his assessable income for the co-contribution income test, which means his income is well over the co-contribution earning limit. Regardless of whether Dave made an after-tax contribution, he would not qualify for a co-contribution.

⁶ Based on current marginal tax rates, 2% Medicare Levy and Low-Income Tax Offset, but without consideration being made for any other tax rebates or offsets that you may be eligible for or any other taxable income you may receive, which could affect your eligibility for any Government co-contribution benefit.

⁷ No investment earning assumptions have been made in the above calculations.

Example 2

Debbie makes additional contributions; she's also eligible for a Government co-contribution

Debbie is 37 and has a salary of $35,000 per year (before any deductions, including tax) and wants to top up her superannuation by making a contribution of $2,000. She's unsure whether to make this contribution to her super from her before-tax or after-tax salary.

The following tables are used for comparison:

After-tax contribution
Gross salary income	$35,000
Less income tax and Medicare Levy	$3,447
Net disposable income	$31,553
Less after-tax super contribution	$2,000
Net income	$29,553

Debbie contributes $2,000 from her after-tax income and is also eligible for approximately $500 in a Government co-contribution. By making an after-tax contribution, Debbie's contribution to super is $2,500.

Alternatively, if Debbie makes an after-tax contribution of $1,000 and a before-tax contribution of $1,266 ($1,076 after applying the 15% contributions tax) she would receive the same net income as she does if she makes only an after-tax contribution. In addition, Debbie will receive the benefit of a Government co-contribution of $500.

Salary sacrifice (before-tax) and after-tax contributions
Gross salary income	$35,000
Less salary sacrifice contribution	$1,266 (before tax)
New taxable income	$33,734
Less income tax and Medicare Levy	$3,181 ⁷
Net disposable income	$30,553
Less after-tax super contribution	$1,000
Net income	$29,553

Let's look at how these two scenarios differ

In this scenario, Debbie's net income remains the same but her income tax is reduced from $3,447 to $3,181 (a saving of $266) and she will continue to receive the same Government co-contribution benefit of $500.

Debbie's contribution to super also increases to $2,576 ($1,076 after-tax + $1,000 + $500).

Low income superannuation tax offset

On 1 July 2017, the Government introduced a low income superannuation tax offset (LISTO), which replaced the low income superannuation contribution (LISC).

LISTO provides continued support for low-income earners to ensure they do not pay more tax on their super contributions than on their take-home pay. You will be eligible for a LISTO contribution to your super fund if your adjusted taxable income is $37,000 or less. The LISTO contribution is equal to 15% of the total before-tax (concessional) contribution for an income year, capped at $500.
